ESSAY

Time — 25 minutes

The essay gives you an opportunity to show how effectively you can develop and express ideas. You should, therefore, take care to develop your point of view, present your ideas logically and clearly, and use language precisely.

Your essay must be written on the lines provided on your answer sheet—you will receive no other paper on which to write. You will have enough space if you write on every line, avoid wide margins, and keep your handwriting to a reasonable size. Remember that people who are not familiar with your handwriting will read what you write. Try to write or print so that what you are writing is legible to those readers.

Important Reminders:

- A pencil is required for the essay. An essay written in ink will receive a score of zero.
- Do not write your essay in your test book. You will receive credit only for what you write on your answer sheet.
- An off-topic essay will receive a score of zero.
- If your essay does not reflect your original and individual work, your scores for the entire test may be canceled.
- An electronic copy of your essay will be made available to each of your designated score recipients: colleges, universities, and scholarship programs.

You have twenty-five minutes to write an essay on the topic assigned below.

Think carefully about the issue presented in the following excerpt and the assignment below.

Frederick Douglass once said, "If there is no struggle, there is no progress. This struggle may be a moral one, or it may be a physical one, and it may be both moral and physical, but it must be a struggle." He was right. Progress is something that must be fought for; without conflict, progress simply does not occur.

Assignment: Does progress result only from struggle and conflict? Plan and write an essay in which you develop your point of view on this issue. Support your position with reasoning and examples taken from your reading, studies, experience, or observations.

There are two false assumptions about experts. One is that they see more clearly and think more intelligently than ordinary citizens. Sometimes they do, sometimes not. The other false assumption is that these experts have the same interests as ordinary citizens and hold the same values. In fact, the important decisions of society are within the capability of ordinary citizens. Not only can ordinary people make their own decisions without the help of experts, but they ought to.

Adapted from Howard Zinn, Declarations of Independence

For many people, the traditional path to success involves graduating from high school and college before working their way up in a particular profession. However, many of society's most successful individuals taught themselves the skills they needed to start their own businesses, invent new technologies, or create works of art. For these individuals, the nontraditional path turned out to be the path to success.

Assignment: Are people who do not follow society's traditional paths to advancement more likely to be successful than those who do? Plan and write an essay in which you develop your point of view on this issue. Support your position with reasoning and examples taken from your reading, studies, experience, or observations.

Some see printed books as dusty remnants from the preelectronic age. They point out that electronic books, or e-books, cost less to produce than printed books and that producing them has a much smaller impact on natural resources such as trees. Yet why should printed books be considered obsolete or outdated just because there is something cheaper and more modern? With books, as with many other things, just because a new version has its merits doesn't mean that the older version should be eliminated.

Assignment: Should we hold on to the old when innovations are available, or should we simply move forward? Plan and write an essay in which you develop your point of view on this issue. Support your position with reasoning and examples taken from your reading, studies, experience, or observations.

Each passage below is followed by questions based on its content. Answer the questions on the basis of what is stated or implied in each passage and in any introductory material that may be provided.

Questions 9-10 are based on the following passage.

Line 5 I accompanied Thiam for the ritualistic morning greetings. It took a long time to complete the full circle. As we moved in our orbit, I noticed others circulating in theirs. The entire village was in motion, and from all
5 directions one could hear "How did you sleep?" followed by inquiries about each family member's sleep. As we walked the village, it became clear that in the tradition of its inhabitants, and even in their imagination, the concept of divided, differentiated, segmented space does not exist.
10 There are no fences, hedges, nets, ditches, or demarcation lines anywhere. The space is single, communal, open; it puts up no limits, offers no resistance.

9. The primary purpose of the passage is to

- (A) recall a favorite pastime
- (B) illuminate a cultural concept
- (C) justify an unpopular conclusion
- (D) describe a dying tradition
- (E) recommend a course of action

10. In the passage, the author is represented as being

- (A) a passionate reformer
- (B) a local leader
- (C) an inexperienced employee
- (D) an exacting critic
- (E) an interested outsider

Questions 11-12 are based on the following passage.

Line 5 Astrophysics is different from most other branches of the physical sciences because it isn't experimental. Generally, when other physical scientists want to test an idea, they go into the lab and construct an experiment that 5 allows them to manipulate reality. Their subsequent observations help to confirm or disprove a hypothesis. "But our lab is the universe," says astrophysicist Marcella Carollo, "which we can't force to do anything. All we can do is make observations, and what we observe is very far
10 away and hard to interpret. But we can still make assumptions that fit the conditions we observe. Based on those assumptions, we then make a prediction."

11. The passage is primarily concerned with

- (A) pointing out an important distinction
- (B) advocating an experimental procedure
- (C) corroborating a controversial hypothesis
- (D) putting to rest a common apprehension
- (E) reporting on a significant discovery

12. The passage implies which of the following about astrophysicists and other physical scientists?

- (A) Both astrophysicists and other physical scientists depend on their ability to alter the physical world in controlled environments.
- (B) Both astrophysicists and other physical scientists are hampered by the inability to collect verifiable data to validate their theories.
- (C) Astrophysicists find it difficult to evaluate data because they are frequently in competition for resources with other physical scientists.
- (D) The hypotheses put forward by astrophysicists are not as readily substantiated as are those of other physical scientists.
- (E) The methods employed by astrophysicists are more scientifically valid than are the approaches used by other physical scientists.

Questions 13-24 are based on the following passage.

The following passage is adapted from a novella set in the New England village of North Dormer. It was first published in 1917.

The young man had passed through the Hatchard gate, and Charity had the street to herself. North Dormer is at all times an empty place, and at three o'clock on a June afternoon its few able-bodied men are off in the fields or woods, and the women indoors, engaged in languid household drudgery.

The girl walked along, looking about her with the heightened attention produced by the presence of a stranger in a familiar place. What, she wondered, did North Dormer look like to people from other parts of the world? She herself had lived there since the age of five, and had long supposed it to be a place of some importance. But about a year before, Mr. Miles, the new Episcopal clergyman at Hepburn, who drove over every other Sunday to hold a service in the North Dormer church, had proposed, in a fit of missionary zeal, to take the young people down to Nettleton to hear an illustrated lecture on the Holy Land; and the dozen girls and boys who represented the future of North Dormer had been piled into a farm-wagon, driven over the hills to Hepburn, put into a way-train and carried to Nettleton. In the course of that incredible day Charity Royall had, for the first and only time, experienced railway-travel, looked into shops with plate-glass fronts, tasted cocoanut pie, sat in a theatre, and listened to a gentleman saying unintelligible things before pictures that she would have enjoyed looking at if his explanations had not prevented her from understanding them. This initiation had shown her that North Dormer was a small place, and developed in her a thirst for information that her position as custodian* of the village library had previously failed to excite. For a month or two she dipped feverishly and disconnectedly into the dusty volumes of the Hatchard Memorial Library; then the impression of Nettleton began to fade, and she found it easier to take North Dormer as the norm of the universe than to go on reading.

The sight of the stranger once more revived memories of Nettleton, and North Dormer shrank to its real size. As she looked up and down it, from lawyer Royall's faded red house at one end to the white church at the other, she pitilessly took its measure. There it lay, a weather-beaten sunburnt village of the hills, abandoned of men, left apart by railway, trolley, telegraph, and all the forces that link life to life in modern communities. It had no shops, no theatres, no lectures, no "business block"; only a church that was opened every other Sunday if the state of the roads permitted, and a library for which no new books had been bought for twenty years, and where the old ones mouldered undisturbed on the damp shelves. Yet Charity Royall had always been told that she ought to consider it a privilege that her lot had been cast in North Dormer. She knew that, compared to the place she had come from, North Dormer represented all the blessings of the most refined civilization. Everyone in the village had told her so ever since she had been brought there as a child. Even old Miss Hatchard had said to her, on a terrible occasion in her life: "My child, you must never cease to remember that it was Mr. Royall who brought you down from the Mountain."

She had been "brought down from the Mountain"; from the scarred cliff that lifted its sullen wall above the lesser slopes of Eagle Range, making a perpetual background of gloom to the lonely valley. The Mountain was a good fifteen miles away, but it rose so abruptly from the lower hills that it seemed almost to cast its shadow over North Dormer. And it was like a great magnet drawing the clouds and scattering them in storm across the valley. If ever, in the purest summer sky, there trailed a thread of vapour over North Dormer, it drifted to the Mountain as a ship drifts to a whirlpool, and was caught among the rocks, torn up and multiplied, to sweep back over the village in rain and darkness.

Charity was not very clear about the Mountain; but she knew it was a bad place, and a shame to have come from, and that, whatever befell her in North Dormer, she ought, as Miss Hatchard had once reminded her, to remember that she had been brought down from there, and hold her tongue and be thankful. She looked up at the Mountain, thinking of these things, and tried as usual to be thankful. But the sight of the young man turning in at Miss Hatchard's gate had brought back the vision of the glittering streets of Nettleton, and she felt ashamed of her old sun-hat, and sick of North Dormer.

(A) defensive
(B) ironic
(C) worried
(D) dubious
(E) speculative
16. The author indicates that, for Charity, the activities experienced in lines 23-25 ("railway-travel . . . pictures") were
(A) novel
(B) comical
(C) meaningless
(D) embarrassing
(E) intimidating
17. Lines 27-33 ("This initiation . . . Library") suggest that Charity's immediate response following the trip to Nettleton was to
(A) attempt to learn more about the larger world
(B) resort to books as a desperate substitute for reality
(C) attempt to improve the quality of the library's holdings
(D) try to improve her status as a library employee
(E) imitate the behavior of Nettleton residents
18. The statement "she pitilessly took its measure" (lines 39-40) means that Charity
(A) estimated the distance from one end of the street to the other
(B) brooded over the condition of the library
(C) felt abandoned and suddenly alone in the world
(D) took a dispassionate look at her surroundings
(E) felt sorry for the narrow-minded villager
19. The description of the "village" in lines 40-48 ("There it . . . shelves") primarily serves to emphasize its
(A) quaintness and simplicity
(B) wealth and influence
(C) cohesiveness and cooperation
(D) isolation and stagnation
(E) wariness and apathy
20. The tone of the statement in lines 56-58 ("My child . . . Mountain") is best described as
(A) defensive
(B) sarcastic
(C) sorrowful
(D) bitter

- (A) immediacy
- (B) obscurity
- (C) inconstancy
- (D) inevitability
- (E) finality

24. Charity's impressions of life on the Mountain have been formed by

- (A) her research in the library
- (B) her recollections of her very early years
- (C) her mental image of an ideal place to live
- (D) the opinions of other North Dormer residents
- (E) information supplied by visitors to North Dormer

35 Questions

Turn to Section 5 (page 5) of your answer sheet to answer the questions in this section.

Directions: For each question in this section, select the best answer from among the choices given and fill in the corresponding circle on the answer sheet.

The following sentences test correctness and effectiveness of expression. Part of each sentence or the entire sentence is underlined; beneath each sentence are five ways of phrasing the underlined material. Choice A repeats the original phrasing; the other four choices are different. If you think the original phrasing produces a better sentence than any of the alternatives, select choice A; if not, select one of the other choices.

In making your selection, follow the requirements of standard written English; that is, pay attention to grammar, choice of words, sentence construction, and punctuation. Your selection should result in the most effective sentence—clear and precise, without awkwardness or ambiguity.

In choosing answers, follow the requirements of standard written English.

Questions 30-35 refer to the following passage.

(1) When Pluto was first detected in 1930, it was welcomed as a newly discovered planet. (2) Their reaction was understandable. (3) Pluto was initially thought to be about the size of Earth and therefore of proper planetary dimensions. (4) But by the late 1970s, closer observation had established that Pluto was in fact less than half the size of Mercury. (5) Dismayed, some astronomers now began to question whether so small an object deserved to be ranked among the planets.

(6) Pluto differs from the other planets also in that it is composed largely of ice—more like a comet than a typical planet. (7) In the 1990s it was discovered that Pluto was just the largest of hundreds of comet-like bodies occupying a region known as the Kuiper Belt. (8) Pluto, the doubters argued, should therefore be classed with these icy objects rather than with the planets.

(9) Rushing to Pluto's defense, many astronomers rejected these arguments, pointing out that the established planets differ among themselves in both composition and size. (10) Mars, for instance, is composed of metal and rock, while Neptune is mostly gas. (11) Why, then, could a planet not just as well be composed of ice? (12) And as for size difference, Jupiter is 1300 times larger than Earth, but no one would suggest that the two bodies therefore cannot both be planets.

(13) Clearly they need to resolve the issue of Pluto's classification. (14) In 2006 the International Astronomical Union defined a planet as a body that directly orbits the Sun, is large enough to be rounded by its own gravity, and has cleared its neighboring region of other orbiting bodies. (15) Pluto was judged to satisfy the first two criteria but not the third, because of all the Kuiper Belt objects populating its neighborhood.

30. In context, which of the following is the best version of the underlined portion of sentence 1 (reproduced below) ?

When Pluto was first detected in 1930, it was welcomed as a newly discovered planet.

- (A) (as it is now)
- (B) it was a newly discovered planet and welcomed as such
- (C) being a newly discovered planet, it was welcomed
- (D) the newly discovered planet was also welcomed by astronomers
- (E) astronomers welcomed it as a newly discovered planet

31. In context, which of the following revisions of the underlined portion of sentence 4 (reproduced below) would add the most relevant information?

But by the late 1970s, closer observation had established that Pluto was in fact less than half the size of Mercury.

- (A) Mercury, the planet closest to the Sun
- (B) Mercury, the smallest of the traditional planets
- (C) Mercury, which was named for a Roman messenger god
- (D) Mercury, which was discovered in ancient times
- (E) Mercury, whose atmosphere is too thin to support human life

32. Which of the following sentences, if inserted immediately before sentence 6, would provide the most effective transition between the first and second paragraphs?

- (A) Pluto's anomalous size was not the only source of doubt.
- (B) This was not the first time that a planet's status had been called into question.
- (C) Such scientific disputes can become surprisingly heated.
- (D) The question of who deserves credit for a scientific discovery is sometimes difficult to settle.
- (E) Many were shocked at the suggestion that Pluto was not really a planet.

33. In context, which of the following is the best revision of the underlined portion of sentence 7 (reproduced below) ?

In the 1990s it was discovered that Pluto was just the largest of hundreds of comet-like bodies occupying a region known as the Kuiper Belt.

- (A) In the 1990s, however,
- (B) In the 1990s, by comparison,
- (C) In fact, in the 1990s
- (D) Similarly, in the 1990s
- (E) Consequently, in the 1990s

34. In context, which of the following is the best version of the underlined portion of sentence 13 (reproduced below) ?

Clearly they need to resolve the issue of Pluto's classification.

- (A) (as it is now)
- (B) the public needs
- (C) something was needed
- (D) further observations were needed
- (E) a precise definition of planethood was needed

35. Which of the following sentences, if placed immediately after sentence 15, would best conclude the passage?

- (A) Pluto's discoverer, Clyde Tombaugh, had died in 1997 and so did not live to see his beloved planet demoted.
- (B) Ceres and Pallas had undergone a similar demotion in the nineteenth century when they were reclassified as asteroids rather than planets.
- (C) Ultimately, then, Pluto was demoted from planetary status not because of its small size but because of the close company it keeps.
- (D) This was perhaps the most momentous decision that the International Astronomical Union had made in its 87-year history.
- (E) Nonetheless, supporters of Pluto point out that it has more moons than Mars, Earth, Venus, or Mercury.

The passages below are followed by questions based on their content; questions following a pair of related passages may also be based on the relationship between the paired passages. Answer the questions on the basis of what is stated or implied in the passages and in any introductory material that may be provided.

Questions 6-9 are based on the following passages.

Passage 1

The green consumer market is exciting, innovative, and filled with products consumers can feel good about purchasing. When paired with other eco-friendly behaviors such as curbing consumption, reusing products, and recycling everything possible, green consumerism—the purchasing of products with the least harmful impact upon the environment—has the potential to change what and how companies manufacture. Ultimately, demand for green products will drive down prices, lead to further innovations, and educate consumers on how their behavior impacts the Earth.

Passage 2

For all its well-meaning appearance, green consumerism is still consumerism. Green marketing tactics often do no more than fool us into thinking that we are doing something environmentally beneficial when actually we are merely responding to the latest gimmick to increase sales. Certainly, some new products are marginally better than previous ones, but few take the necessary creative leaps that encourage manufacturing that truly is in harmony with the ways of the Earth. In many respects green consumerism marks a turning point, for it is bringing Earth consciousness into the limelight. But it is important to understand the difference between what is merely green hype and the true attempts at establishing a healthy and ecological marketplace.

6. The primary purpose of both passages is to

- (A) raise a question
- (B) evaluate a trend
- (C) advance a theory
- (D) condemn a practice
- (E) make a recommendation

7. Both authors would agree that green consumerism

- (A) is likely to benefit the environment in substantial ways
- (B) is a proven solution to addressing an ongoing problem
- (C) has caused people to be smarter and more selective shoppers
- (D) can raise people's awareness of the ecological effects of their behavior
- (E) will become more popular as more companies make better products at a cheaper cost

8. In lines 17-18 ("Certainly . . . ones"), the author of Passage 2 primarily

- (A) makes a concession
- (B) issues a challenge
- (C) offers an appeal
- (D) downplays a concern
- (E) criticizes a phenomenon

9. In line 21, "marks" most nearly means

- (A) signals
- (B) records
- (C) traces
- (D) blemishes
- (E) observes

Questions 10-16 are based on the following passage.

The author is an Italian American journalist who first visited Rome in 1947 and was based in Italy in the 1970s.

From the moment I walked into the Grappolo d'Oro, sometime during the summer of 1968, it became one of my favorite hangouts. It was then a very typical, very modest Roman trattoria,¹ with paper tablecloths and bare walls, but the atmosphere was friendly and the food simple but superb.

My earliest memories of Rome, in fact, are inextricably enmeshed with recollections of wonderful meals. The women in my family were all fine cooks, and I grew up, even in New York, eating daily the sort of food only the finest Italian restaurants in the United States can occasionally approximate. When I went back to Rome after several years away, it seemed perfectly natural to me to be eating inexpensively in establishments like the Grappolo d'Oro where every dish was prepared to provide not merely nourishment, but pleasure. The term "fast food" had not even been coined, and the Italians I knew considered American cooking to be an atrocity. A meal in Rome, even in the middle of a working day, was an experience to be savored and lingered over and never took less than two or three hours, after which one went home for a snooze behind closed shutters before going back to work. At night, long after the tourists had departed for their hotels, the Grappolo would remain busy, sometimes until nearly midnight, with tables of diners reluctant to abandon the source of such contentment and still nibbling on cheeses, fruit, and sweets. And after, the talk would be about food—discussions about the quality of the fish or the freshness of the mozzarella (I have a friend who won't eat a mozzarella more than six hours old), the success or failure of a particular recipe, all carried out with the intensity of a political debate. Good cooking in a Roman trattoria is not merely a necessity, but a philosophical imperative.

Nevertheless, it is unusual to hear anyone in Rome speak well of a particular restaurant. Even the regulars at a favorite haunt will seldom praise it. A couple of years ago, after an absence of several months, I was discussing the Grappolo with a Roman crony of mine. We had just finished eating there with a party of friends and I had expressed satisfaction that standards had not been lowered while I was away. My friend disagreed. "It is not the same," he said, and proceeded to complain that a pasta serving he had recently ordered had not been cooked correctly and that twice in the past two weeks his favorite dish, penne all'arrabiata, had not been spicy enough. He also commented that he had been finding less variety in the offerings on the appetizer table. I observed that he must have been eating there regularly, as often as two or three times a week. He shrugged. "What do you expect? It's not what it was, but it's not bad," he said. I stopped worrying. "Not bad" is a term of encomium² in Rome.

² Enthusiastic praise

10. As presented in the passage, the Grappolo d'Oro is best characterized as

- (A) an illustration of inexplicable success
- (B) an exemplar of its kind
- (C) a project gone awry
- (D) a relic of antiquity
- (E) a member of a rare species

11. In lines 1-6, the Grappolo d'Oro is characterized as

- (A) dreary
- (B) extravagant
- (C) welcoming
- (D) frantic
- (E) sophisticated

12. In line 3, "modest" most nearly means

- (A) bashful
- (B) proper
- (C) reasonable
- (D) unpretentious
- (E) reserved

13. The comment in lines 8-12 ("The women . . . approximate") serves to

- (A) stress the author's ignorance about methods of preparing Italian food
- (B) account for why the author frequents certain kinds of restaurants in Rome
- (C) highlight the difference between eating with family and eating in a small restaurant
- (D) illustrate the author's surprise upon encountering authentic Italian food in Rome
- (E) indicate how the author's taste in food evolved over time

14. Lines 18-22 ("A meal . . . work") indicate that the people the author knew in Rome
- (A) ate protracted meals only on special occasions
 - (B) were constantly seeking out new dining experiences
 - (C) placed a very high priority on the enjoyment of food
 - (D) distrusted restaurants that did not serve Italian food
 - (E) thought a great deal about how their food would affect their health
15. In line 32, the author uses a comparison to a "political debate" to suggest
- (A) seriousness and passion
 - (B) raucousness and animosity
 - (C) maneuvering and compromise
 - (D) cynicism and pandering
 - (E) preparation and strategy

16. The author's "friend" (line 41) is most similar to a person who
- (A) has become so upset with an airline's service that she only uses that airline in an emergency and when no alternative airline is available
 - (B) praises a film to encourage others to see it even though he chooses not to see it again
 - (C) boasts to teammates about the benefits a new exercise routine has brought her
 - (D) watches a long-running television show devotedly because many episodes are entertainingly bad
 - (E) finds fault with a favorite novelist's recent books but continues to read them and looks forward to new ones

Questions 17-24 are based on the following passages.

These two passages discuss water fluoridation, the practice of adding controlled amounts of fluoride to public water supplies for the purpose of reducing the incidence of tooth decay in children. Passage 1 is from a 2004 book; Passage 2 is from a 2010 book.

Passage 1

Fluoridation has been a contentious issue for many years because of concerns about the effects of the fluoride on public health. Opposition has come from many sources, sometimes distinguished researchers and policy makers, as well as an array of fringe organizations and vocal individuals. The Internet has dozens of Web sites with headings such as "Act Now to Ban Fluoride in Drinking Water" and "You're Putting What in Our Drinking Water?" Over the years the proponents have demonstrated to the satisfaction of professional dental and medical organizations worldwide that fluoridation is effective in reducing caries* and is safe. The opposition has claimed that it does not work and that it causes almost every affliction known to humans. Science must always be challenged because that is the way that progress is made, but the challenge must use scientifically sound experiments and robust analysis. In some cases scientific studies have been badly designed, but the anti-fluoridation lobby weakens its own credibility by making claims that are often completely spurious and by resorting to falsehoods, conspiracy theories, and scare tactics.

Concerns about the safety of fluoridation have been made and investigated many times over the last 40 years. One of the most recent summary statements on the safety was by the U.S. National Institute of Dental and Craniofacial Research:

As with other nutrients, fluoride is safe and effective when used and consumed properly. After more than 50 years of research and practical experience—as well as data evaluation by the U.S. government, committees of experts, and national and international health organizations—the verdict remains the same: fluoridating community water supplies, at optimal levels, is an effective and safe method for preventing tooth decay.

Passage 2

At a public meeting held on October 17, 2009, in Yellow Springs, Ohio, a community that was considering halting its fluoridation program, Paul Connett gave a twenty-minute presentation on the scientific arguments against the practice. After a county health commissioner and local dentist responded, a woman in the audience said,

"Whether this practice is safe or not, or beneficial or not, I want freedom of choice. It is my right to choose what substances I put into my body, not some government agency's."

This woman echoed what many opponents of fluoridation have believed and articulated for over 60 years: government has no right to force anyone to take a medicine. Thus, while in the effort to end this practice worldwide it is helpful to provide scientific evidence that the program is neither effective nor safe, this commonsense position remains at the crux of the argument against fluoridation.

Proponents respond to this ethical argument by turning it upside down. They argue that it is unethical to deprive children of a benefit that might reduce pain and help them lead healthier lives, especially children from low-income families. However, by not putting fluoride in the water, you are not depriving anyone of access to fluoride: it is available in tablet form and in fluoridated toothpaste. From an economic perspective, avoiding fluoride is an expensive business, whether it involves purchasing bottled water for cooking and drinking or the use of distillation equipment or reverse osmosis systems. Thus, low-income families are disproportionately burdened by fluoridation since by and large they cannot afford avoidance measures.

17. Which statement best describes the relationship between the two passages?

- (A) Passage 2 explores an ethical implication of a practice discussed in Passage 1.
- (B) Passage 2 elaborates on an argument referred to in Passage 1.
- (C) Passage 2 affirms the philosophical position stated in Passage 1.
- (D) Passage 2 discredits the validity of the evidence offered in Passage 1.
- (E) Passage 2 agrees with a solution proposed in Passage 1.

18. Which statement summarizes an important difference between the two passages?
- (A) Passage 1 discusses government policy, whereas Passage 2 criticizes public sentiment.
 - (B) Passage 1 describes the pros and cons of a practice, whereas Passage 2 focuses exclusively on its benefits.
 - (C) Passage 1 is made up of a series of generalizations, whereas Passage 2 supports each claim with expert testimony.
 - (D) Passage 1 offers a historical overview, whereas Passage 2 bases its argument on a recent study.
 - (E) Passage 1 relies primarily on scientific evidence, whereas Passage 2 considers such evidence a secondary concern.
19. In line 16, "sound" most nearly means
- (A) severe
 - (B) wise
 - (C) firm
 - (D) healthy
 - (E) valid
20. The author of Passage 1 considers the actions of the "lobby" (line 18) to be
- (A) deplorable
 - (B) unconventional
 - (C) tentative
 - (D) unavoidable
 - (E) auspicious
21. The statement in lines 27-36 is best described as
- (A) a legal position
 - (B) an unprecedented recommendation
 - (C) an unequivocal endorsement
 - (D) a candid admission
 - (E) an informal announcement
22. The "commonsense position" (lines 52-53) is best described as one that values
- (A) scientific authority
 - (B) societal stability
 - (C) public health
 - (D) individual agency
 - (E) government intervention
23. The statement in lines 59-61 ("However . . . toothpaste") primarily serves to
- (A) note an exception
 - (B) refute a claim
 - (C) acknowledge a drawback
 - (D) level a criticism
 - (E) define a term
24. The author of Passage 1 would likely characterize the "avoidance measures" (line 67, Passage 2) as
- (A) prudent
 - (B) expedient
 - (C) onerous
 - (D) inadvisable
 - (E) inadequate

Note: You may start your answers in any column, space permitting. Columns not needed should be left blank.

- Mark no more than one circle in any column.
- Because the answer sheet will be machine-scored, you will receive credit only if the circles are filled in correctly.
- Although not required, it is suggested that you write your answer in the boxes at the top of the columns to help you fill in the circles accurately.
- Some problems may have more than one correct answer. In such cases, grid only one answer.
- No question has a negative answer.
- Mixed numbers such as $3\frac{1}{2}$ must be gridded as

3.5 or 7/2. (If $\frac{31}{2}$ is gridded, it will be interpreted as $\frac{31}{2}$, not $3\frac{1}{2}$.)

- Decimal Answers: If you obtain a decimal answer with more digits than the grid can accommodate, it may be either rounded or truncated, but it must fill the entire grid. For example, if you obtain an answer such as 0.6666..., you should record your result as .666 or .667. A less accurate value such as .66 or .67 will be scored as incorrect.

Acceptable ways to grid $\frac{2}{3}$ are:

The passage below is followed by questions based on its content. Answer the questions on the basis of what is stated or implied in the passage and in any introductory material that may be provided.

Questions 7-19 are based on the following passage.

This passage is from a 2008 translation of a book by a Japanese novelist and long-distance runner.

Most people only see the surface reality of writing and think of writers as involved in quiet, intellectual work done in their study. If you have the strength to lift a coffee cup, they figure, you can write a novel. But once you try your hand at it, you soon find that it isn't as peaceful a job as it seems. The whole process—sitting at your desk, focusing your mind like a laser beam, imagining something out of a blank horizon, creating a story, selecting the right words, one by one, keeping the whole flow of the story on track—requires far more energy, over a long period, than most people ever imagine. You might not move your body around, but there's grueling, dynamic labor going on inside you. Everybody uses their mind when they think. But a writer puts on an outfit called narrative and thinks with his entire being; and for the novelist that process requires putting into play all physical reserves, often to the point of overexertion.

Writers blessed with talent to spare go through this process unconsciously, in some cases oblivious to it. Especially when they're young, as long as they have a certain level of talent it's not so difficult for them to write a novel. They easily clear all kinds of hurdles. Being young means your whole body is filled with a natural vitality; focus and endurance appear as needed, and you never need to seek them on your own. If you're young and talented, it's like you have wings.

In most cases, though, as youth fades, that sort of free-form vigor loses its natural vitality and brilliance. After you pass a certain age, things you were able to do easily aren't so easy anymore—just as a fastball pitcher's speed starts to slip away with time. Of course, it's possible for people as they mature to make up for a decline in natural talent. Like when a fastball pitcher transforms himself into a cleverer pitcher who relies on changeups.* But there is a limit. And there definitely is a sense of loss.

On the other hand, writers who aren't blessed with much talent—those who barely make the grade—need to build up their strength at their own expense. They have to train themselves to improve their focus, to increase their endurance. To a certain extent they're forced to make these qualities stand in for talent. And while they're getting by on these, they may actually discover real, hidden talent within them. They're sweating, digging out a hole at their feet with a shovel, when they run across a deep, secret water vein. It's a lucky thing, but what made this good fortune possible was all the training they did that gave them the strength to keep on digging. I imagine that late-blooming writers have all gone through a similar process.

Naturally there are people in the world (only a handful, for sure) blessed with enormous talent that, from beginning to end, doesn't fade, and whose works are always of the highest quality. These fortunate few have a water vein that never dries up, no matter how much they tap into it. For literature, this is something to be thankful for. It's hard to imagine the history of literature without such figures as Shakespeare, Balzac, and Dickens. But the giants are, in the end, giants—exceptional, legendary figures. The remaining majority of writers who can't reach such heights (including me, of course) have to supplement what's missing from their store of talent through whatever means they can. Otherwise it's impossible for them to keep on writing novels of any value. The methods and directions a writer takes in order to supplement himself become part of that writer's individuality, what makes him special.

Most of what I know about writing I've learned through running every day. These are practical, physical lessons. How much can I push myself? How much rest is appropriate—and how much is too much? How far can I take something and still keep it decent and consistent? When does it become narrow-minded and inflexible? How much should I be aware of the world outside, and how much should I focus on my inner world? To what extent should I be confident in my abilities, and when should I start doubting myself? I know that if I hadn't become a long-distance runner when I became a novelist, my work would have been vastly different. How different? Hard to say. But something would have definitely been different.

7. The author is primarily concerned with

- (A) analyzing a widespread assumption
- (B) offering a set of recommendations
- (C) defining a personal characteristic
- (D) reflecting on an activity
- (E) explaining a preference

8. The author suggests that the "surface reality" mentioned in line 1 is

- (A) soothing
- (B) fulfilling
- (C) deceptive
- (D) tedious
- (E) distressing

9. The list of activities in lines 6-9 ("sitting . . . on track") primarily serves to
- (A) emphasize the effort involved in writing
 - (B) expand on a conventional view of writing
 - (C) advocate the best method for writing a story
 - (D) reevaluate the steps involved in writing a story
 - (E) imply that writing is a straightforward task

- (A) rank
 - (B) equality
 - (C) intensity
 - (D) height
 - (E) degree
11. Lines 18-26 primarily serve to
- (A) express a regret
 - (B) present an exception
 - (C) shift the topic
 - (D) question an established position
 - (E) support a previous claim
12. The author most likely uses the phrase "it's like you have wings" (line 26) to
- (A) point out a similarity between writing and long-distance running
 - (B) indicate the ease with which a certain group writes
 - (C) suggest that certain writers have unique skills
 - (D) characterize the experience of beginning a new work
 - (E) argue that writing is not as difficult as it may appear
13. Which of the following describes a situation most similar to that experienced by the fastball pitcher referred to in line 30?
- (A) A pianist who has not played recently finds that performing in public is more difficult than he anticipated.
 - (B) A teacher returning to the classroom finds that she has forgotten some strategies for teaching basic skills.
 - (C) A dancer late in his career finds that he can no longer perform certain movements as easily as he once did.
 - (D) An actor finds it harder than usual to learn the lines for a part she is not interested in playing.
 - (E) A painter finds that his work becomes more popular as he matures as an artist.
14. The author most likely uses the phrase "only a handful, for sure" (lines 49-50) to
- (A) add a qualification
 - (B) initiate a debate
 - (C) correct a misconception
 - (D) introduce a hypothesis
 - (E) validate a supposition
15. Which of the following best describes the function of the sentence in lines 52-53 ("These fortunate . . . into it")?
- (A) It helps to clarify an unresolved issue.
 - (B) It provides historical information to support a claim.
 - (C) It contradicts a point about talent made earlier in the passage.
 - (D) It continues a metaphor introduced earlier in the passage.
 - (E) It elaborates on the definition of terms used earlier in the passage.
16. In lines 58-59, the author uses the phrase in parentheses to
- (A) justify the choices he has made in his work
 - (B) imply that his work has been found valuable
 - (C) evaluate the work of other writers
 - (D) explain how he supplements his writing
 - (E) display a certain modesty about his work
17. In line 60, "store" most nearly means
- (A) supply
 - (B) value
 - (C) abundance
 - (D) business
 - (E) source

18. What does the author suggest about the questions in lines 67-74 ?
- (A) They help him assess his physical energy.
 - (B) They are used to enhance his creativity.
 - (C) They are of concern to most writers.
 - (D) They apply to both his running and his writing.
 - (E) They are important to writers with minimal talent.

19. In lines 74-78 ("I know . . . different"), the author describes the effect of running on his writing as
- (A) invigorating
 - (B) motivating
 - (C) tiring but calming
 - (D) unusual but useful
 - (E) significant but elusive

- (A) $\{3, 9\}$
 (B) $\{4, 16\}$
 (C) $\{3, 6, 12\}$
 (D) $\{3, 8, 9\}$
 (E) $\{4, 12, 24\}$

2. The product of 10 and what number is equal to $\frac{1}{2}$?

- (A) $\frac{1}{20}$
 (B) $\frac{1}{5}$
 (C) $\frac{1}{4}$
 (D) 5
 (E) 20

3. In the figure above, line l is parallel to line m . What is the value of x ?
- (A) 58
(B) 68
(C) 72
(D) 78
(E) 82

5. If $|x - 4| < 3$, which of the following is a possible value of x ?

(A) 1
(B) 4
(C) 7
(D) 10
(E) 13

4. A long-distance telephone company charges a fee of $0.90 for each call in addition to $0.26 for each minute of the call. What is the price, in dollars, of a call that is x minutes long, where x is a positive integer?
- (A) 1.16
(B) $1.16x$
(C) $0.64x$
(D) $0.9x + 0.26$
(E) $0.26x + 0.9$

6. If 3 consecutive integers have a sum of 63, what is the greatest of the 3 integers?

(A) 14
(B) 20
(C) 21
(D) 22
(E) 23

8. The figure in the xy -plane above is a parallelogram. What is the value of $n + k$?

(A) -8
(B) -2
(C) 0
(D) 2
(E) 8

DVD PLAYER SALES IN COUNTRY X, BY YEAR

7. The line graph above shows the number of DVD players sold in country X for each of the years 1997 to 2006. Of the following years, which one had sales closest to twice the sales of the previous year?

(A) 2000
(B) 2002
(C) 2004
(D) 2005
(E) 2006

9. A drawer contains paper clips, of which 8 are red, 9 are blue, and the rest are yellow. A paper clip is to be selected at random from the drawer. If the probability of selecting a blue paper clip is $\frac{1}{3}$, how many yellow paper clips does the drawer contain?

(A) 7
(B) 10
(C) 18
(D) 27
(E) 34

10. Circle P lies completely inside circle M . The radius of circle M is 9 inches. Which of the following must be true?

I. The area of circle P is 64π square inches.

II. The radius of circle P is greater than $\frac{9}{2}$ inches.

III. The diameter of circle P is less than 18 inches.

(A) I only
(B) II only
(C) III only
(D) I and III
(E) II and III

11. If $x^{x-y} = 25$ for positive integers x and y , which of the following is a possible value of y ?

(A) 1
(B) 2
(C) 3
(D) 4
(E) 5

12. On a number line, three points have coordinates r , s , and t , where $r < s < t$. Which of the following CANNOT be true?

- (A) $t < r + s$
 (B) $t > r + s$
 (C) $t = r + s$
 (D) $s = \frac{r+t}{2}$
 (E) $t = \frac{r+s}{2}$

14. If $\frac{1}{10} \leq x \leq 1$, for what value of x is the value of $10 + \frac{1}{x}$ greatest?

- (A) $\frac{1}{10}$
 (B) $\frac{3}{10}$
 (C) $\frac{7}{10}$
 (D) $\frac{9}{10}$
 (E) 1

Note: Figure not drawn to scale.

13. In the figure above, PQS and RTS are right triangles. If $PQ = 16$, $RS = 10$, and $ST = 6$, what does PT equal?
- (A) 6
 (B) 8
 (C) 10
 (D) 12
 (E) 14

15. In the xy -plane, line ℓ passes through the vertex of the parabola $y = 2(x - 1)^2 + 3$ and the point $(6, 3)$. What is the slope of line ℓ ?

(A) -1
(B) 0
(C) 1
(D) 2
(E) 3

16. The lengths of the sides of a triangle are 3, 5, and x . What are all possible values for x ?

(A) $x = 3$ or 5
(B) $x = 3, 4, 5, 6$, or 7
(C) $2 < x < 8$
(D) $3 \leq x \leq 7$
(E) $x \geq 3$

SECTION 10

Time — 10 minutes

14 Questions

Turn to Section 10 (page 7) of your answer sheet to answer the questions in this section.

Directions: For each question in this section, select the best answer from among the choices given and fill in the corresponding circle on the answer sheet.

The following sentences test correctness and effectiveness of expression. Part of each sentence or the entire sentence is underlined; beneath each sentence are five ways of phrasing the underlined material. Choice A repeats the original phrasing; the other four choices are different. If you think the original phrasing produces a better sentence than any of the alternatives, select choice A; if not, select one of the other choices.

In making your selection, follow the requirements of standard written English; that is, pay attention to grammar, choice of words, sentence construction, and punctuation. Your selection should result in the most effective sentence—clear and precise, without awkwardness or ambiguity.
